

Young students of science will benefit from this book, provided they possess deep curiosity about our surrounding world. This kind of curiosity may not be easily available among the students now, but acquiring it, along with the skill for the kind of reasoning presented here, should be perhaps the main aim of physics education. And the author finishes the book on this note in his final chapter.

S. S. BHATTACHARYYA
*Atomic & Molecular Physics Section,
Department of Materials Science,
Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science,
Jadavpur, Calcutta-700 032*